We would rather sell this dahlia to a beginner than any other variety we grow because we know it will grow very large, bloom early and profusely and make a large clump of roots under conditions where many varieties would fail.

Roots $1.50 ea. $12.00 doz.

Rooted cuttings $.60 ea. $4.00 doz.

The Drought of 1944

Our farm in 1944 was the finest display of dahlias ever seen, according to the thousands of visitors.

This was mostly due to our rigorous selection of varieties. Planting only the hardiest, most resistant of varieties. Even in a season which was unusually dry we succeeded—by using plenty of water—in obtaining thousands of flowers by August 1st, and then by the middle of September the fields were a mass of color.

Buy a good variety—give it cultivation and water, and it will more than reward you.

TERMS

Prices in this catalogue are our net prices. For large quantities or hundred lots, write for special quotations.

Root orders are filled with true to name field grown divisions. Rooted-cutting orders will be filled from true to name stock grown and shipped in the way that has made us foremost in the shipping of green dahlia stock.

POTTED PLANT shipment is being discontinued because of the high success of our rooted-cuttings. The plant was nothing more than a rooted-cutting with one or two weeks growth added and gave no better results than a cutting. As a matter-of-fact, our leading customers seem to prefer the cutting because the results are the same and the price far cheaper.

ORDER EARLY

Because of a short root crop in '44, some varieties are listed as rooted-cuttings only. However, we have an exceptionally large green stock on these varieties and you may feel confident that we will ship you the finest stock you can procure.

GUARANTEE

We guarantee all stock to be true to name, disease free and to arrive in good condition. Any that proves otherwise will be immediately replaced.

SHIPPING CHARGES

Large root orders sent express collect. Small roots orders (from 1 to 10 roots) remit 60c for parcel post.

All rooted-cutting orders, remit 30c regardless of size, plus 25c for Special Delivery. If you have no Special Delivery service, remit 15c for Special Handling.

To guarantee you perfect condition of cutting shipments, 25c must be added for Special Delivery service.

ALL SHIPMENTS SENT EXPRESS COLLECT UNLESS PARCEL POST CHARGES ARE INCLUDED. INCLUDE 25c FOR SPECIAL DELIVERY ON ALL PLANT ORDERS.

DISCOUNT

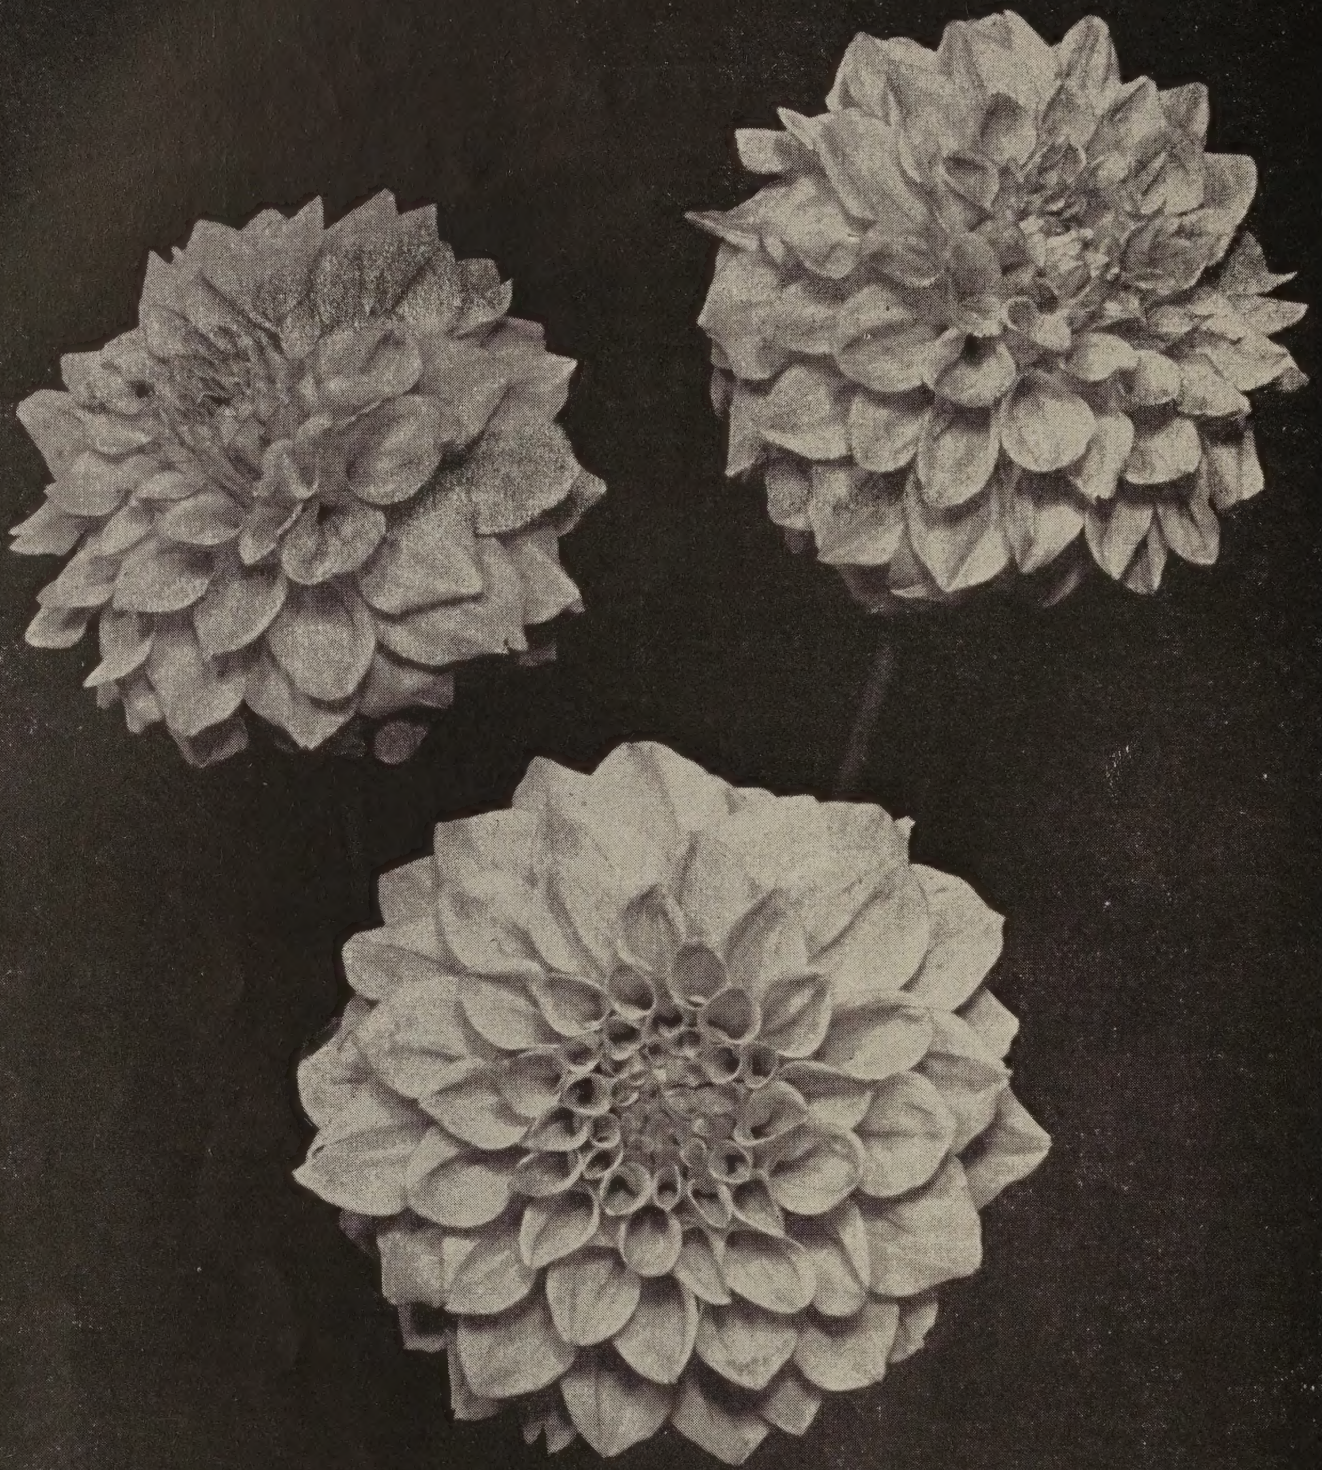

Six (6) of one variety at the dozen rate—all other prices strictly net. Do not overlook the attractive dozen rate on our rooted-cuttings. Six of a variety may be purchased at $\frac{1}{2}$ the dozen price.

CASH with order unless credit is established. Make checks and Money Orders payable to Golden Rule Dahlia Farm. Telephone 463X, Lebanon, Ohio.

Types are abbreviated as follows: FD—Formal Decorative, ID—Informal Decorative, SC—Semi-Cactus, C—Cactus, Pom.—Pompon, Min.—Miniature.

We have been highly successful in shipping rooted-cuttings to all parts of the country and we strongly urge you to buy in this new economical way.

The dahlia cuttings we ship are the same as we annually plant by machinery direct into the field. Many customers have told us "your rooted-cuttings are comparable to green plants of other growers."

"Orange Flame"

"Orange Flame" is the most rugged growing, free-branching, orange cut-flower we have ever grown. Early to bloom and the longest natural stem of any cut flower dahlia.

Get a start of "Orange Flame" this year and you will never be without it. A good propagator and root maker.

Roots $10; Rooted Cuttings, ea. $3; Doz. $25

POT-ROOT COLLECTION

12 Pot-roots for $3.00
24 Pot-roots for $5.25

Last summer we grew quantities of late plants in pots. These produced the little walnut sized tubers that are so full of vitality that they even out grow the larger roots.

We bunched and mixed the entire lot and now offer them as mixed unlabeled pot-roots for those who are not particular about keeping the names.

These small roots all will produce plants just as large as those from our rooted-cuttings and roots.

Recent Introductions and Standard Varieties

These descriptions are based on observations in our own fields and trial plots throughout Ohio. We still maintain that if a dahlia succeeds in the hot insect-infested area of Southern Ohio, it surely will grow even better on the East and West coast, in the lake regions, or in the mountains.

Hardy Chrysanthemums

Hardy Garden Mums are the easiest fall flowers to grow and will give satisfaction even if neglected to the point that would ruin an ordinary dahlia plant.

Their flowers are not as large, nor their colors quite as brilliant as dahlias, but they will resist a heavy frost and the blooms last for days in water. The plants may be transplanted in full bloom either in the house or to another location and they will be none the worse for the experience.

Our Mum Collection contains the most up-to-date and best varieties for the average garden and we strongly urge you to order some of these gorgeous, easy-to-grow specimens listed on page 25.

New English Chrysanthemums

These chrysanthemums are early blooming, making it possible to raise them where large mums have never been raised before. They can be grown like the smaller hardy mums without disbudding, but if you will disbud them to 8 or 12 blooms to the plant it is surprising how large they become. (Prices are for plants which will grow and bloom this year.)

. . . Principles of Dahlia Culture . . .

SOIL. Any type soil is suitable or may be made so. If too heavy with clay, sand may be added—not too coarse. Humus is very important. Peat moss, compost or purchased humus may be added. Since most soil is deficient in humus, one cannot go far wrong in adding it, preferably in the fall or very early spring. For the midwest, rye is almost the only successful cover crop; sow after Dahlias have been dug and plow under in the spring while still tender, before heads have well developed. If allowed to get too old and tough ploughed-under rye may ruin your soil for a season. When weather and soil are right, plow deeply a few weeks before planting.

In many of the heavy soils in this section drainage is most important. Deep plowing, sufficient sand and humus to make the soil porous should suffice, but locations are found where tile drainage is necessary to protect against very heavy rainy spells.

Dahlias do well in a neutral to fairly acid soil. Liming however will do no harm and sometimes much good by releasing nutrient ingredients of the soil.

FERTILIZING. Nitrogen produces rank foliage and flowers. Phosphates produce tuber growth and fibrous roots. Potash makes for color of bloom and resistance of plants to disease. Any application of fertilizer should be well mixed with about 1000 times its weight of soil to prevent burning of fibrous roots. We use 2-10-6 (nitrogen-phosphate-potash) with our planting. Fertilizers mixed with soil at planting is the most efficient method. Top dressing is effective with potash and nitrogen but the phosphates do not get down to the roots until plowed under.

Manure is doubly important as a fertilizer and supplier of humus. Chicken manure should be applied sparingly or composted before using. Leaves composted till decayed are a valuable source of both humus and fertilizing elements. Most soils are deficient in potash, which may be supplied in wood ashes, muriate or sulphate of potassium.

It is better to use some reliable brand of mixed fertilizer at about six pounds for every ten to twelve hills of dahlias, well mixed with plenty of soil than to use a chemical fertilizer like sodium nitrate for it takes a chemist to know how little to use.

PLANTING. Thorough plowing or spading, with soil dry enough to break up well is the best preparation. April 15th to July 1st depending on the season is right for Ohio Valley. For cut-flowers plant as early as soil and season dictates. For exhibition, June 1st is right. In general, 4 ft. apart each way is a good rule. For the home garden 4 or 5 stakes should be provided. 4 by 5 ft. with two plants to a stake is also good. Roots should be 4 in. deep, set horizontally, in heavy soil and 6 in. deep in very sandy soil. Plants should be moistened and planted without disturbing the roots, about one-half inch deeper than they were in the pot. Water thoroughly. Plants will produce more plump tubers in a lean farm soil than in a rich garden. For best tuber production, let the soil dry out well between waterings.

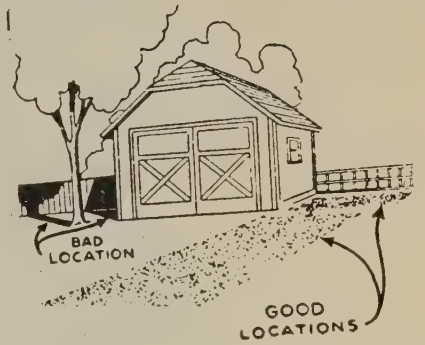

DISBUDDING. This operation is valuable for the production of the best flowers and stems for either cutting or exhibition. Take out the "suckers" or small laterals for two or three nodes or joints (where leaf joins stalk) down from the terminal bud, starting with the first or crown bud of the plant. Cut bloom before back is wilted, thus stimulating development of fresh growth, buds and flowers. Visit us in July and August and we will give you a practical demonstration.

WATERING. In protracted drought the foliage should be well and forcibly sprayed with water to prevent red spider. In general, do not water till the ground becomes fairly dry and then soak to a good depth. When surface shows cracks and is dry enough, use rake or hoe to provide dust mulch to conserve soil moisture. A light daily watering is unnecessary and even injurious.

CULTIVATING. Working the ground between plants is beneficial to keep weeds in control and conserve soil moisture in dry weather. Dahlias will respond to cultivation whenever soil conditions are suitable. As plants grow larger, cultivation should be shallower so as not to cut surface feeder roots. Tie plants to stakes, once for every 18 inches of growth.

DIGGING should be about November 1st to 15th regardless of date of killing frost. Dig without bending or breaking necks of tubers. Cut stalks to within 2 inches of roots. Store in cool cellar immediately after digging, packing in peat moss, clean sawdust, sand or other suitable material. If tubers have been well nourished with balanced fertilizer and not over-fertilized and season has been such as to properly develop and ripen tubers, they will keep well. Big thick stems are more conducive to crown or stem rot than slimmer stems grown on leaner soils. Farm grown, not heavily fertilized, not watered dahlias, produce more tubers that almost always keep well through winter.

DIVIDING. In the spring divide clumps by splitting the stem and crown so as to leave one eye or sprout to each division of one or more roots.

Principles of Hardy Mum Culture

When you receive your mum plants, plant them immediately and water thoroughly. If your soil happens to be too wet to work at the time, pot or plant them in a box of good dry dirt and water thoroughly. Place your box or pots in a warm sunny position until planting is possible.

Hardy Mums are easy to grow. Cultivate regularly and give plenty of water if season is dry. Fertilize twice a year and water heavily after each application.

Pinch out the terminal shoots once or twice during the season, discontinue pinching by August 1st.

Protect your plants in winter by covering with excelsior or corn stalks after the ground is frozen. Clumps can be dug in the fall, and placed in a cold frame or light cellar, wintered there and then divided or propagated in the spring.

CUT FLOWER DAHLIAS

We have always believed that the future of the dahlia depends on its ability as a cut-flower to successfully compete with other flowers.

Good cut-flower dahlias—as we look at them, should have all the following points: Vigor, or free from stunt—Early and prolific, it should bloom about sixty days after planting and continue rapid-fire until frost—insect resistant foliage (leaf hopper)—blooms should open rapidly to avoid burning by wind and sun—good substance of flowers, they should at least keep three days—long, straight stems—bush should be a natural brancher and not require topping or pruning—A clear self color.

These requirements to be sure are rather stiff, and as far as we know there are only two disseminated varieties that can meet all of them. However, there are a good many that have enough of these good points to get along nicely.

The following list contains the best cut-flower dahlias in order of their importance. This data is based on growing conditions in the midwest. In the cooler lake regions and on the east coast, other varieties not mentioned here are highly satisfactory.

WARNING

Dahlia rooted cuttings must be potted immediately in 3" or 4" pots. Use a light mixture of soil consisting of 1 part garden soil, 1 part leaf mold or decayed peat and $\frac{1}{4}$ part fine coal ashes or sand. Use no fertilizer. About half the cutting should be below the surface of the soil after potting.

Dahlia cuttings cannot be successfully grown indoors.

If a cold frame or greenhouse is not available, a makeshift cold frame can be constructed with a few panes of glass and a wooden box.

After potting, bury pots to $\frac{3}{4}$ of their depth in ordinary soil in a cold frame. Coarse ashes underneath the pot may be necessary for drainage. Do not subject to excessive draft or heat until after ten days. Cold frames must be ventilated during heat of the day to prevent burning of plants.

When plants have doubled their size they may be subjected to more severe conditions for hardening off, and in about two weeks may be set out where they are to grow. They should be not too tall for best results.

WATER THOROUGHLY

“Orange Flame” is our new orange colored dahlia especially developed for hot adverse climates. It is strictly a commercial cut-flower variety and the long-stemmed flowers will average four to eight inches across. Fast, vigorous growth, extra long stems and with a substance like wax, it is the answer to a florist’s dream.
